Another Man Is Pardoned on Day of His Sentence

Case of Wilson Is Similar to Local Affair Last April

Few Minutes After Judge Passes Sentence, Pardon Is Issued

3 BROTHERS IN IT

One Is Lieut.-Gov. Another Is Prisoner, Third Carries Pardon

EL DORADO.—A few minutes after sentence had been pronounced upon Fred Wilson, convicted embezzler of a sawmill payroll, Monday, a pardon was received from Little Rock that he had been granted a full pardon by his brother, Lieut.-Gov. Lawrence Wilson, acting as governor in the absence of Governor Parnell.

Circuit Judge L. S. Britt had hardly completed the pronouncement of sentence, fixing the penalty at four years' imprisonment, when the lieutenant governor announced that his brother was set free. Fred Wilson, convicted of padding the payroll of the Hudson-Cooper Lumber company, served actually only five and a half hours in prison—the time he was held in the Union county jail following sentence, and a third brother arrived with the pardon proclamation issued by the brother in the lieutenant governor's chair.

Wilson pleaded guilty last March to four indictments charging embezzlement of several thousand dollars of company funds while serving as bookkeeper in charge of the payroll account. He was not represented by an attorney when his case was called at the March term of court, but pleaded guilty to all counts of the indictment and asked for a 30-day delay of sentence to enable him to arrange his affairs. Because court would not be in session at the end of 30 days, Judge Britt agreed not to impose sentence until the June term.

Other Charges Possible

H. W. Cooper, part owner of the company from which Wilson took the money, said Monday night that Prosecuting Attorney Joe J. Joiner, promised to present to the Grand Jury four additional counts of alleged embezzlement growing out of Wilson's manipulations of payroll accounts.

Sentences pronounced Monday were in turn consecutively, making a total of four years.

Members of the Union county sheriff's office said Tuesday that Acting Governor Wilson asked that his brother be permitted to bring his commitment papers to the penitentiary unaccompanied by an officer.

The request was denied and the acting governor was told that his brother should be taken to the penitentiary with "the rest of the prisoners."

Prosecuting Attorney Joe Joiner, although reticent about becoming involved in the case at its new stage, said that there are other charges contingent to embezzlement which can be brought against Fred Wilson. He would make no statement as to whether the charges would be pressed.

The indictments against Fred Wilson were returned December 3, 1930, charging that he had stolen the sums of $265.58, $420.27, $175.54 and $433.58, the property of the Hudson-Cooper Lumber Co.

Prosecuting witnesses named in the indictment were W. H. Cooper, Carl Goff, Caddie Kinard and Mrs. Ira Hudson. Kinard is an expert accountant and the others are officials of the company.

Ex-Employer Indignant
W. H. Hudson said that Wilson had embezzled the money by padding payrolls. "I didn't check up on him until he got a 10-day vacation, then I took a look at the books," Mr. Hudson said. "I promised him that I would not prosecute if he repaid the money. When we discovered the exact sum he had embezzled, I wrote a letter which he did not answer. I then sent a man to see him and he sent me word through M. E. Gunnals, one of my employees, that if I had him prosecuted, Lawrence would get him out of it and that I could go to hell."

"I want to see those other counts pressed against him," he added.

Fred Wilson lives near Magnolia and has a wife and several children.

Cow to Pay Expense Through School

Youth Plans Paying His Expenses From Sale of Milk

RUSSELLVILLE.—(AP)—One prospective student at Arkansas Polytechnic College has solved the old question of how to work his way through school.

Clyde Wilson, graduate of Green Forest high school this year, arrived at the college and asked Dr. J. R. Grant, its president, how he could work his way through next fall and winter. Dr. Grant didn't know—he had answered the question too many times already this year.

Wilson went to a boarding house for lunch and while there solved his problem. He asked the proprietor to let him bring a cow down from Green Forest next fall, the proceeds from the milk to pay his way through college. He promised one that will give four gallons of milk.

Wilson and his cow may be expected next fall.

Their car escaped another machine near the residences of John McClanahan, and finally crashed into the Russell's car.

The Russells had just driven from the yard into the street, and were on the right curb when the Jones car crashed into them. Mrs. Russell was thrown against the dash and her head lacerated. Their car, brand new three weeks ago, was wrecked.

Claims No Regret For Killing Mate

Husband, a Former Judge Had Threatened Life of His Wife

MADISONVILLE, Tex.—(AP)—Mrs. Carl T. Harper shot her husband, the former district judge here, to death Monday and told friends: "I have neither fear nor regrets for what I have done."

She had not been arrested Monday afternoon, and County Attorney Luther Broadway said she probably would not be charged. If any complaints were filed, he added, she undoubtedly would be released on her own recognizance.

Harper, according to the stories told investigating authorities, had been drinking heavily, had threatened his wife's life and attempted, even as she shot him, to shoot her. The former magistrate had had a pistol under a sofa. Sheriff J. R. Gibson said he was informed, and lunged for it, but Mrs. Harper reached it first.

When she first pulled the trigger, the cartridge did not explode. Harper was shot through the eye and the right side. He died instantly.

The former judge's career had been in some respects a stormy one. He was tried for murder about three years ago in connection with the killing of Lee Rich, a Houston sailor, and was acquitted.

Two sons of the couple, Paul 23, and Webb, 21, took their mother's part after the shooting. Friends of the wife said.

The Swiss scientists, who later landed successfully on a glacier in the Austrian Tyrol, here are shown with Professor Piccard's family beside the balloon gondola.

State and Bridge Funds Tied Up in Banks Which Have Failed

NASHVILLE.—(AP)—The blame for depositing millions of dollars in state funds in the Bank of Tennessee, a subsidiary of Caldwell & Company, both now defunct were laid to governor Henry H. Horton in one of seven additional impeachment articles presented to the house of representatives Tuesday.

It is charged that last August the governor called the state funding board into session and that some members of it in the presence of the governor and with his knowledge and participation directed the preparation of a resolution that "undertook" to make the so called Bank of Tennessee the depository for all bridge funds.

More than $3,000,000 in bridge funds were on deposit when the bank failed.

Four Burned In Kilgore Oil Fire

$20,000 Damage Is Caused to Well Before Blaze Is Stopped

KILGORE, Tex.—(AP)—Four men were in hospitals here Monday night recovering from burns received early Monday when the National Securities company No. 1 Kilgore oil well, three blocks from the main business section of Kilgore, caught fire and burned for several hours before it was extinguished.

Two explosions were heard before the well and oil soaked derrick burst into flames, endangering the entire business section of Kilgore. Firemen fought frantically to curb the blaze and at one time despaired of success when electricity failed in the Kilgore water department's power plant. The well finally was quenched with chemicals. ## Man Kills Woman In Hotel Lobby

Houston Hotel Lobby in Uproar Over Slaying on Mazzanine

HOUSTON, Tex.—(AP)—Mrs. Marie Hart, 25, was shot to death Monday afternoon on the mezzanine floor of the Rice hotel, called the largest in the South and the police blamed her death on a lover she had spurned. The shooting, witnessed by many, threw the big lobby in an uproar.

Don Covin, about 27, formerly of Beaumont, was arrested as he left the hotel and a coroner declared after an inquest, that he slew the woman.

Covin, who was charged with murder or late in the day, told officers and newspapermen at the police station that he "didn't plan to kill her."

"I'd rather see her dead," he said, "than living with another man."

He came back to Houston from Beaumont Friday, he went on, and Mrs. Hart had been here a week before he arrived.

"I've been in love with her for a long time," the prisoner continued. "I didn't plan to kill her. I never thought of such a thing until just before it happened."

"While we were talking she told me she had gone back to her husband and that if I bothered her she would have her husband have me arrested and run out of town."

"Then I couldn't bear the thought of her living with her husband. I hadn't planned to kill her. It just happened on the spur of the moment."

The police gathered up a large number of witnesses.

Free Arkansas from the cattle tick.

Poverty and Crime

POVERTY, misery and crime go hand in hand. They form such a closely-knit triumvirate that one sometimes is forced to believe that most of the so-called wickedness, per-versity and general cussedness of the human race would vanish from the scene if only economic conditions could be improved sufficiently.

A few days ago the health council of a representative American city submitted its report on the city's "submerged tenth"—the very poorest class, which occupies a part of the town that sociologists have dubbed the "economic graveyard."

Ninety thousand people live in this particular section.
They make up 10 per cent of the city's population. Listen to some of the figures about them:

To begin with, this 10 per cent of the city's inhabitants occupies only 6 per cent of the city's area. It contributes 11 per cent of the city's births; but only 6 per cent of the hospital births. It has 16 per cent of the infants' deaths, 18 per cent of the city's total unemployed and 24 per cent of the charity cases. It furnishes 17 per cent of the city's illegitimate births, 20 per cent of its juvenile delinquency cases, 35 per cent of its murders and 49 per cent of its houses of prostitution.

A glance at those figures is enough to show the inroads that vice, crime and general all-around unhappiness and misfortune make on the economically under-privileged. The child born in such an area does not get a fair chance in life.
The cards are stacked against him from the beginning.

Nor is that all. The more fortunate man, who lives miles from such a neighborhood and grows to manhood without ever missing a meal or spending a night in jail, is effected by that neighborhoods existence far more than he usually imagines.

Because of this submerged and poverty-stricken group in his town, his taxes are higher. Because of the crime-breeding conditions that prevail there, his chances of getting held up by a bandit some day are higher than they should be.
Because of the illegal enterprises that flourish there, his city government is infested with graft.

Such an area, in other words, is a point of infection; a plague-spot, influencing the entire city. No city can be healthy when poverty rests on any considerable number of its inhabitants.

Governor and the Highway Audit

GOVERNOR HARVEY PARNELL seems to have an unlimited supply of excuses, ridiculous as they are, why the highway department should not be investigated.

First and perhaps a bit hasty he declared that the highway audit act passed by the last legislature provided for a thorough, comprehensive audit and that he would insist that the commission proceed under the make-shift bill.

That was so silly, in the face of the opinion of five competent lawyers, members of the commission, that the bill provides for nothing but a confirmation of the records that the governor apparently has decided to let that matter drop.

Next he comes forth with a noble gesture, offering generously to lend the "whole power of his office to the end that a thorough audit of the highway department may be made."

Governor, you can well afford to do that, because you have no power to lend. If you don't know it, you should, because most any high school boy knows that you cannot bestow any power on the highway audit commission, not provided for in the act.

The commission is limited to the authority provided for in the bill, and nothing you can do or say will change it.

Your power rests in calling a special session of the legislature, a gesture that is apparently very distasteful to you for some reason. Governor, you didn't fool anyone with your offer to lend the "whole power of your office towards a thorough audit."

It is obvious that you have grossly misjudged the intelligence of the people of Arkansas.

They are not the same imprudent people who voted for you last August.

I'll tell you what the people think, Governor. They think you can't call a special session, even if you wanted to. They think that your advisors won't let you. They think that you must do as you are told to do, and speak when you are told to speak.

That's what they think, Governor.—Walter Sorrells, Jr., in Pine Bluff Commercial.

The town boosters who failed to get a factory have one satisfaction. It can't close down on them.

Among the Public Enemies . . . .

The shackles of an old love straitened him,
His honor rooted in dishonor stood,
And faith unfaithful kept him falsely true.
—Tennyson

When this newspaper was exposing the circumstances of the William R. Atkins furlough in April we were asked if we knew that Lieutenant Governor Wilson had a brother who had just been convicted of embezzlement at El Dorado.

We knew the story—but didn't use it. A man may be his brother's keeper, but he isn't to be charged with his brother's sins.

The story was revealed Monday by Lieutenant Governor
Wilson himself when he issued a full pardon to Fred Wilson, under four years' sentence from Union county for stealing $4,000 from a sawmill pay roll.

Mr. Wilson said that he pardoned his brother out of consideration for "our grief-stricken mother." No man will sneer at that. It is almost society's only consideration for criminals. Lawrence Wilson's regard for his mother is a holy thing—but the interposing of his high office between his brother and the penalty demanded by law, is something that men will pause to think about.

If the lieutenant governor appeared weak and corrupt when furloughing William R. Atkins in our own county, he seems pitiful and tragic while pulling the mighty reins of state to save one of his own blood. He doesn't flinch. He doesn't apologize. As he sees it, he has nothing to apologize for—Lawrence Wilson, like the tragic man in Tennyson's poem, is faithful to kith and kin even when that faith betrays the state.

High honor as we hear it taught to our children requires that when in public office we deal strictly and fairly with all men, whether rich or poor, whether high or low, remembering that all men have mothers, but not every one has a relative in command of the state.

This is the law of good government, of honor in a public place. Lawrence Wilson has broken it. He does for a brother, as governor, what he would do for him as a private citizen. All the solemn honors of high office, all the confidence and responsibility thrust upon him by two hundred thousand voters, means nothing to him. Office is to him a personal property—not a public trust.

Among the public enemies of America we must list the political spoilers who build up their machines at the expense of the criminal courts, and who use the powers of elective office to accommodate a private need.

The pioneer fathers of America would have sneered this man out of public life forever. A later generation only looks upon him sadly. He is more the rule of modern politics, than the exception.

No man begrudges another aiding a brother. But every criminal story has another side, untold unless a newspaper tells it. The little sawmill company from which Fred Wilson stole $4,000 was founded by the late Ira Hudson, who moved to El Dorado from Missouri twenty years ago. Mr. Hudson, a stalwart, fine-spirited business man, was honored with election to the city council, and to the presidency of the chamber of commerce.

One Saturday afternoon six years ago he carried his little pay roll out to the boys at the mill. Almost within sight of it, two negro hijackers blocked the road, dragged him from his car, and after a terrible fight in an oil swamp, killed him and robbed him.

His widow and his children still own the sawmill busi-

What has Lawrence Wilson to say about that trust and those courts, when his brother is concerned? —W.

WASHINGTON.—The Supreme

Court decision which upheld

Indiana's special chain store tax is expected to stimulate efforts in other states to curb the chains.

Bitterness aroused by a chain store operations has appeared to increase along with the steady increase of business and the mounting annual share of retail trade,

now probably more than 20 per cent, handled by chains.

The Supreme Court made no

contribution to the old argument

as to whether chain stores are good, things or bad things. It made the point, five justices against four, that it was not the job of the federal government to dictate state tax policies when there was no distinct conflict with the Federal Constitution.

The Indiana law graduates a tax charged for an operating license from $3 for the owner of a single store, to $10 on from each of two to five stores under the same ownership, $15 on each from six to 10 stores, $20 in excess of 10 but not in excess of 20 and $25 on every store in excess of 20.

Chain Stores Taxed Higher

The Indiana law will not drive

any chains out of business, but its state's contention that a check on the growth of chain stores would promote the public welfare. Now the other states which seek to do something about chain stores may at least be sure that the Supreme Court will okay such laws as they may pass similar, to Indiana's.

This type of law is the most important method of chain store restriction yet undertaken by the states.

The famous Capper-Kelly resale price bill in Congress which sanctions stipulations by manufacturers as to the retail prices of their products, is also aimed at price-cutting tactics frequently employed by chains.

Measure Commended

Both manufacturers and many independent merchants recommend this measure, contending that chain stores can sell standard products at lower prices than independent dealers because of small profit margins and large scale purchases and that they can even sell them at a loss in order to attract purchasers to whom they then figure on selling other products at exorbitant profits.

But there is strong opposition to the Capper-Kelly bill. Many contend that it would raise prices

to the consumer, encourage monopoly, limit competition, and give manufacturers control over

We had a rain about two weeks

thought we would get another rain last Saturday night, but it passed us up. We are still enjoying winter

Some people are having a hard

"Aye, tear her tattered ensign down—" but they didn't, because thousands

Mates Refuse to 'Catch' For Irish Soldier-Pug

BELFAST, (AP)—Private Colin Walsh
is a new Irish hope for heavyweight honors, but he's no sweetheart of the regiment.

He never says a boxing glove till a few months ago, but he seemed to know how to use 'em by instinct. He started out practicing on his comrades in arms and mowed them down
so fast he'd soon used up all the available supply. He was willing to start in at the beginning again, but the regiment wasn't.

Despite the present dearth of sparring partners, he's won all his three professional fights and is looking for more. Walsh is 26. He comes from the wilds of Connemara, and is six feet two.

Former Major Hurlers Team Up as Semi-Pro

PITTSBURGH.—(AP)—Two pitchers who were famous in the National league a few years ago, are now teammates on the semi-pro team of suburban Duquesne.

They are Wilbur Cooper, former star
left-hander of the Pittsburgh Pirates
and the Chicago Cubs, and Bill Doak, spitballer of the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Robins.

Cooper considered one of the best pitchers in the league when in his prime, came to the Pirates in 1912. He joined the Chicago Cubs in 1925 and left the league the following year.
Cooper won 216 games and lost 174 in his major league career. Doak also boasts an impressive record.

of the American Revolution were said Saturday by a District of Columbia

active protests direct to the sellers of goods.

Mrs. R. Winston Holt, chairman of

What is so rare as a day in June?
If ever, come perfect days;
When Heaven tries earth if it be in June,
And over it softly her warm ear lays;
Whether we look, or whether we listen,
Her life murmurs, or see it glist-
en;
By cloud feels stir of might;
And instinct within it that reaches
And towers, Groping blindly above it for light,
Tries to a soul in grass and flowers;
The flush of life may well be seen
Thrilling back over hills and valleys;
The cowslip starts in meadows green,
The buttercup catches the sun in its chalice,
And there's never a leaf nor a blade
Too mean
To be some happy creature's palace.

Circle No. 1 of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church, with Mrs. R. M. Briant leading, held their regular monthly meeting at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Briant's in North Washington street. A very inspiring devotion was given by Mrs. J. L. Stringer. "The Changing Conditions in China and Other Foreign Lands," a most interesting subject was discussed by the circle members. The time has arrived when the Christian people of the heathen lands are strong enough to take charge of the churches and schools, which have been founded and established by the Woman's Missionary Society and the churches about fifty-five years ago. The churches in America must continue financial help. It is a glad day however, that we are able to see the heathen people turning to God, and renouncing idols of wood and stone. After the meeting closed, the members were invited out under the trees, where a most tempting picnic lunch was served. The July meeting of Circle No. 1 will be held at Dyke's springs.

Circle No. 4 of the Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist church was held on Monday afternoon at the city park. Singing the hymn "O Happy Day," opened the meeting followed by responses to the roll call with scripture verses, and the Lord's prayer in concert. Miss Catharine Franks favored the meeting.

Don't Rasp Your Throat With Harsh Irritants

"Reach for a LUCKY instead"

When you visit your physician for your periodic health examination, one of the very first things he asks you to do is to open your mouth wide, and to say "Ah." He is examining the delicate lining of your throat. "Ah!"
There is not a man or woman who could even make this simple sound, if in the throat there were no Adam's Apple. For your Adam's Apple is your larynx—the voice box containing your vocal chords. And what a delicate piece of Nature's handiwork the Adam's Apple is. A slight cold—even a tiny particle lodged in the throat—and our voice often grows husky. In acute cases, we may even lose our voice for several days. Don't rasp your throat with harsh irritants—Reach for a LUCKY instead—remember, LUCKY STRIKE is the only cigarette in America that through its exclusive "TOASTING" process expels certain harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos.
These expelled irritants are sold to manufacturers of chemical compounds. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder 20,679 American physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating. LUCKIES are always kind to your throat. And so we say
"Consider your Adam's Apple."

Blevins Boy Makes Good School Record

John Stephens Will Finish University of Arkansas June 9

What is perhaps the best scholastic record ever made by a Blevins student will culminate June 9 when John Stephens takes his degree from the University of Arkansas. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elijah Stephens, who live two miles north of Blevins. He finished the high school work offered at Blevins in 1926 and completed requirements for entrance into college at the State Teachers College in Conway.

During his four years residence in the university he has made a large portion of his expenses made very creditable grades and found time for a large amount of extra-curricular activity. He was president of the A. G. E. club, member of the press club and during his senior year edited the Agriculturalist. This last achievement is especially noteworthy since under his editorship this unsupervised publication was easily one of the outstanding school journals of the South, and compared very favorably with the best grade agricultural papers of the country.

After graduating Mr. Stephens will remain at the University for several weeks working toward his master's degree. Later in the summer he expects to do research work in Eastern Arkansas for the Federal Department of Agriculture.

Future Bright For Cantaloupe Crop

Vines Show Rapid Growth During the Past Five or Six Days

Many cantaloupe growers throughout the Blevins and McCaskill section are in much better spirits this week than at any time previous as the cantaloupes, a crop upon which many farmers throughout this section depend largely for their cash income, have begun to grow. The acreage this year may not be quite so large as in former years, but perhaps more work is being done on the patches than if the acreage were larger.

In 1929 there were 350 car loads of cantaloupes shipped from this territory. Last year only about half as many cars were shipped.

Many of the patches along the roads through this territory now have runners about a foot long on the vines and with an occasional rain a good yield is expected for 1931.

50,000,000 Frenchmen CAN Be Wrong, Says Tex

Everybody was happy when they sailed for a whoopee invasion of the European bright spots. But Texas Guinan, Broadway night club hostess who is pictured here with some of her show girls, was alternately irate and hysterical when French officials boarded the liner at Le Havre and announced that the troop would be barred from landing, temporarily at least. It seemed that there was some forliddling technicality about the French employment laws. And added to La Guinan's embarrassment was the report that she was on England's list of undesirable aliens.

McCaskill Planter Lays By Corn Crop

Corn in the Ozan Bottom Said to Be Above the Average This Year

Dan McCaskill, prosperous planter in the north part of the county and for whom the town of McCaskill received its name told a representative of The Star Monday that he had the best prospect for a corn crop on his bottom farms than for several years.

Monday his hands were plowing a field of corn in the Ozan bottom for the last time. Mr. McCaskill said that this corn was a little over waist high and had as pretty a color as any corn he had ever seen.

Many other fine crops of both cotton and corn may be seen throughout the bottom lands of north Hempstead county. The hill crops are also looking better during the past week.

Work Begins On School Building

Seats Removed From Old Building—Ground Is Broken For New

On Thursday of last week Contractors Bardwell & Freeman began preliminary work toward the construction of the new High School building at Blevins. All seats and furnishings were removed from the old building and stored in the Duckett building. The stage has been torn away in the auditorium, and as soon as material is on hand the work of remodeling of this building will begin.

Several trees stood on the site for the new building. These were removed last week and the ground is now cleared for construction. Within a short time the building will begin to take form.

Mr. Freeman will not move to Blevins as was previously announced. Other interests will necessitate his absence much of the time of construction, and Mr. Herndon, who will serve as foreman, will move to Blevins to oversee the work.

League Social Is Greatly Enjoyed

More Than Thirty Young People Attend this Outing

Though disappointed at the failure to secure fish the Epworth League was not to be outdone last Thursday and substituted bacon and eggs to go right ahead with the planned social. More than 30 young people drove about three miles out the Hope highway where the cats were prepared and games played.

The only regrettable incidents of the occasion were an accident occurred to Mrs. P. C. Stephens while preparing material for the outing and the fact the president, Oren Stephens, was sick. Neither of these were able to attend and the election of officers was postponed.

Community Wide Revival Planned

Five Denominations Are Represented in Meeting at Blevins

A meeting in which fine fellowship and good feeling abounded was held at the Blevins Methodist church last Friday evening. Ten men were in attendance and represented five denominations which have churches within two miles of Blevins. The chief object of the meeting was to discuss and lay plans for a community wide revival to be held sometime in the late summer. The Women's Missionary Society of the Methodist church had prepared a splendid chicken dinner for the occasion, and all present entered heartily into the fellowship it afforded.

Those present were Rev. M. D. Williams, Rev. Horace Honea, Rev. Finis Honea, Rev. W. J. Whiteside, Melton White, A. H. Wade, P. M. Nesbit, Thomas Bailey, H. M. Stephens and H. W. Timberlake. Others who were invited and found it impossible to attend were Rev. W. H. Stingley, Rev. J. C. Patterson, Rev. J. W. York, W. H. Cummings, Ad Nivens and T. L. Stuart. Those present represented the following denominations: Nazarene, Presbyterian, Baptist, Methodist, Episcopal and Methodist Protestant.

After dinner the group resolved into a parliamentary body. Rev. W. J. Whiteside was elected chairman and A. H. Wade secretary. The only business officially before the house was the proposed community revival. The second Sunday in September was selected as the date to begin the meeting and to continue it for ten days or two weeks. A committee of five, Rev. W. J. Whiteside, Rev. Finis Honea, Rev. Horace Honea, A. H. Wade and Thomas Bailey, were elected to secure a preacher and make other necessary arrangements for the service.

It is expected that a tent will be secured for the services, and it will be pitched somewhere within the village of Blevins. The standing committee will hold its first meeting at the home of A. H. Wade, Tuesday, June 16. After this time more definite arrangements can be announced.

At the close of the meeting a rising vote of thanks was given the ladies who prepared the dinner, and the meeting was closed with prayer by P. M. Nesbit.

have been teaching for several years Friday. They will remain until Wednesday when they return to that city to attend Centenary College this summer. They have been re-elected to teach at Shreveport next year.

North Hempstead Farmers Cut Oats

More Small Grain Grown Through Section Than in Many Years

Many acres of oats and wheat have been harvested throughout the north section of Hempstead county within the past five or six days. On several farms great shocks of oats are still in the fields, while many other growers have stored their crops in the barns.

It is said that a very little of the crop will be threshed, as most of the crop will be used as a combination hay and grain feed.

According to reports of many older citizens, there is a larger acreage and a better yield of oats throughout this section than there has been for many years.

Those who planted their acreage in the fall are getting for the best cuttings it is said.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 BERYL, however, is not in love with TOMMY. Wilson, she says, is a poor fellow, but she will marry him if he can only get her to believe that it is his duty to marry her.

Irene is jealous when she finds in a voice that Beryl wins a radio contest. Beryl's debut was a success and she has many admirers and new friends but she cannot forget her hopeless love for TOMMY. (Continued on page 2)

When Irene learns that Beryl has money she tries to win him from Beryl.
 Tommy's aunt dies and he loses money and his job. When he finds Irene of his bad luck, she breaks their engagement. Finally Irene asks him to marry her and he agrees. She tells him that Tommy is in love with her and she will marry him if he can only get her to believe that it is his duty to marry her.

LET me see it," Mrs. Everett begged and Irene gave her the telegram. It was from Prentiss, informing Irene that he'd be out early that day to ask her parents to let her marry him immediately. His father, he said, had wired him to cut short his vacation and return home at once. He wouldn't go without her.

When Mrs. Everett finished reading it she looked at Irene with a light of childish excitement in her usually rapid blue eyes.

"What are you going to do?" she cried.

Irene put up her arms and stretched lazily before she answered. Then, "I don't know," she said as though the matter were not really important.

A faint frown creased her mother's forehead. She was thinking of Beryl—of her old-fashioned impelled threat to marry Beryl.

"I think you ought to do as he says," she said solemnly. "His father's a big man."

Irene pouted. "I'm not going to have anyone arranging my affairs for me," she declared petulantly. "Especially an in-law."

"But honey," her mother went on, "you have to consider what's best all around."

"I do not," Irene denied. "A girl has a right to make the plans for her own wedding. And I was thinking of something more elegant than a hurried-up affair. His father can just wait. Prentiss is entitled to a vacation."

Her mother sighed. "He's had quite a nice one now, it seems to me," she said weakly. "You'll both get along much better if you don't start by turning his father against you."

THEY understood each other perfectly. There had been no mention of Irene's love for Prentiss. To neither of them was it necessary to the girl's happiness that she should have him. What Mrs. Everett really meant to say, and Irene knew it, was that Irene should like him while she had the chance, if she wanted him.

"I'll think it over," Irene promised with feigned indifference. Then she added as her mother moved to go, "Will you press my flowered bathrobe for me?"

"It's not an ink spot on it," her mother told her, "but I'll do up the little pink swiss for you."

"Oh, that old thing," Irene said disgustedly. "I haven't a decent dress for morning wear."

She had no intention of wearing the dress if coaxing Beryl could prevent it. When her mother had gone back downstairs she hastened to Beryl's room.

Irene entered with a sweet smile and a softly spoken, "How's your old grouch this morning?"

Beryl eyed her thoughtfully. "Sit down," she said shortly. "I want to talk with you."

Irene ceased to stammer. She did not like Beryl's tone. "I haven't much time," she said doubtfully. "I just came in to see . . ."

"If you could borrow something," Beryl finished for her. "I guessed that much. Well, maybe you'll get it, but first you've got to hear what I have to say."

"Dear me! Do you have to look as though you've lost your best friend?" Irene complained.

"You'd be serious too for once in your life, perhaps, if you'd seen Tommy Wilson as I saw him this morning," Beryl snapped at her. "This morning?" Irene repeated. "Has he been here?"

"No."
 "Oh, another one of your tramps! I really don't see why mother allows you to sneak out of the house at all hours."

"Didn't you know you were driving Tommy to desperation?" Beryl cried. "How could you sit there last night with Prentiss and hear him whistling for you?"

"So you were spying! What a sweet character to be consoling me."

BERYL ignored the words and the insulting tone. "You're going to stop this nonsense with Prentiss way."

Gaylord and behave as you ought to with Tommy," she said hotly. "He's sacrificed everything for you and if the poor devil thinks he's got to have you to be happy, why, he's going to. It'll be like a dose of castor oil—hard to take but good for the system. But he'll never be fit for anything until he's cured of you."

"That's a nice way to talk," Irene flared up. "What are you suggesting—a trial marriage?"

"It won't even be that," Beryl returned dryly. "You'll leave him when you're ready. A fair trial gives everyone a chance."

"And I suppose," Irene retorted, "when I'm through with him you'll get him. Is that the big idea?"

Beryl stared at her with sudden disdain. "No," she said quietly. "It isn't a big idea; it's just your idea."

"I won't stay to be insulted any further," Irene cried and started to leave the room.

Beryl stopped her. "I'm going to tell Prentiss that you promised to marry Tommy," she said evenly.

Irene wheeled. "You let me alone!" she stormed. "You're always causing me trouble! I don't see why you can't mind your own business. I'm not always meddling with you!"

"Will you tell Prentiss?" Beryl asked her. "I'll give you that opportunity to save your face. You're clever enough to get out of it with credit to yourself."

Irene's rage was mounting rapidly, but it had not yet gained complete control of her. In Beryl's offer she saw a way out of her difficulty. She'd just need to stall about telling Prentiss until they were safely married. Then Beryl could do nothing.

"I think you're horrid!" she cried with temper enough to mislead Beryl. "What good would it do you for Prentiss to know that I was engaged to Tommy?"

"That's not the point," Beryl returned coolly. "Will you tell him?"

"You can give me a little time to think it over, can't you?"

"No."
 "Haven't you any heart at all?" Irene whined, appearing to give in.

"No."
 "All right then, I'll tell him—for I know you would. You're that mean, but you needn't be so sure"—she paused, thinking it was just as well not to say to Beryl that she thought Prentiss would marry her in spite of any revelations concerning Tommy. Beryl would want to make certain that Prentiss was told all there was to tell. She might tell him herself, at once, in her own way.

"You'll pay for this," she threatened, turning away. "Just you wait until I tell Mama."

Beryl replied, "but I won't wait long."

SHE went on with her house cleaning and Irene flounced out of the room to go down and tell her mother what had happened.

Mrs. Everett marched upstairs to give Beryl a lecture. After a trade during which Beryl did not answer she ended suddenly with, "I can't see why you interfere when it's so plain that you think Irene would make Tommy unhappy."

"That's reasonable," Beryl returned as her mother obviously waited for a reply. "It's because, had as it will be for Tommy to marry Irene, I'm afraid he'd get into serious trouble without her. And it won't last long anyway."

"And then what?" Beryl looked dreamily into space over the brush mop she was leaning on. "Tommy will grow," she said quietly. "There's something in him that's good and strong. It's down pretty deep, but it's there."

"Well," her mother remarked, "you seem to think a sight of him."

"And it's nothing to you that your sister's happiness is at stake?" her mother pressed. "You wouldn't mind seeing her make a match that was bound to end that way—in divorce, maybe? Just to give a boy a chance to grow up?"

Beryl looked at her with honest, fearless eyes. "I'm more concerned with Tommy," she said frankly. "He's worth more than Irene. She's nothing but a fire, but if he can hold her now he may be willing to let her go when he's grown up."

"You're perfectly heartless," her mother told her bitterly, and went to join Irene.

She found her putting on the chiffon dress that had first been intended for her wedding gown.

"You poor child," she said. "I can't do a thing with your sister. She's a brute," Irene asserted. Then she added in a whisper, "but she's not as smart as she thinks. Listen, Mama, here's what I'm going to do." She put a finger to her lips and tiptoed over to close the door which Mrs. Everett had left slightly ajar.

"I'll fool her," she added, coming back to the dresser where the telegram lay under a soiled powder puff. She smiled as she took up the sheet of yellow paper. "Talk about your lucky breaks!"

And then she told her mother how she was going to outwit Beryl. (To Be Continued)

VAN BUREN—A combination of cows, chickens, and hogs have solved the problem of making both ends meet for C. C. Creekmore of Graphic, according to Claude J. Byrd, county agent. Mr. Creekmore keeps six sows giving four gallons each on pasture; 30 hens average 25 eggs per day, and the skimmed milk feeds the brood sow and keeps the cost of mash for hens down to $1.40 per hundred. With more of either class of livestock farming operations would be at a loss, but with this number of each, a hay and pasture program for the cows, the balanced farm plan makes money for the owner through economical production.

After Rioting Convicts Set Fire to Illinois Penal Farm

This is all that remained of two of the four dormitories at the Illinois State Penal Farm at Vandalia after inmates set fire to the institution in a desperate riot. They were to have been moved into a newly completed fireproof building in a week. Ten of the 600 convicts were wounded by guards and Vandalia police as they tried to go over the barbed wire enclosure.

Sinclair Surprises Us

HARRY SINCLAIR, who owned Zer, leading money winner of all time until Gallant Fox came along, thinks Twenty Grand is "a fine horse." When Twenty Grand won the Derby in 2:01 4-5 we began to suspect that very thing, too. Mr. Sinclair confirms the opinions of only about 60,000,000 people who are aware there is such a horse as Twenty Grand.

Can Such Things Be?

ART DEVLIN, scout for the Giants, was talking the other day, using his hat as a microphone.

"When the spitball first came in to use," spoke Art, "every pitcher who couldn't use it was faking it. One day Hub Purdue fanned Fred Merkle four times in a row and Merkle said: 'Watch that guy's spitball. It's unhittable!'"

"Well, Purdue wasn't using a spitball at all. He was faking it and fanning Merkle on a fast ball that Fred would have murdered if he hadn't been thinking of the new spitball."

(Pause while the writer registers violent doubt.)

Poor Old Ormesby!

CLEVELAND felt sorry for the poor Red Ormesby a year ago when he was bearded by a pop bottle in a demonstration that the antics of another umpire started. But Cleveland felt very vexed with

Mr. Ormesby the other day when Red missed a decision at first base and called an Indian runner out when Jimmy Fox caught a ball three feet away from the bag. Scribes, the next day declared Ormesby could not possibly have seen the play because his eyes were filled with dirt kicked up by the player sliding to first.

Ormesby steadfastly refused to call a conference of his fellow umpires on the play, which led the local scribes to hazard the assertion that it may have been Ormesby's heart, rather than his eyes, that contained the dirt.

The Shell Remains

BILL TILDEN didn't look his years in any of his victories over Karl Kozeluh or Vincent Richards. He seemed to have everything. Cannonball service, cunning, strategy. Perfect placements. Amazing recoveries.

Everything? Yes, everything but youth. Everything he needed to beat Cochet, Doeg and the others, except that sweet warm spark.

Youth provides the power of sustained, swift vitality without which the shell, however comely, is an empty counterfeit.

Tilden seemed to have everything against Kozeluh and Richards. But he could beat those fellows without turning on the power. They did not put him on a spot where he had to depend upon speed and dash. He won without vitality.

ITS REPUTATION WELL DESERVED

Black-Draught Equal To The Expectations of a Bristol Man Who Tried It.

"I had heard of it so much, I thought there must be some good in it,"—a reference to Theford's Black-Draught by Mr. W. J. Rogers, a well-known Bristol man, residing in that city at 1308 Penn Avenue. Mr. Rogers said he had been using Black-Draught fifteen years, when needed, and considered it "a splendid remedy."

"One day," said Mr. Rogers, "when I needed a laxative, I decided to try Black-Draught, and I have been glad ever since that I did, as I found it to be as recommended—a splendid medicine for biliousness and constipation."

"I have to be out a lot, with the position I hold, and seem to be easily constipated. This makes me have dizzy spells; my head feels dull and I feel tired and worn-out. But after I take a few doses of Black-Draught, I feel fine, full of pep. Black-Draught has been quite a help to me."

"Thousands of others have reported the relief of many disagreeable symptoms, due to constipation, indigestion, biliousness, following their use of this medicine."
